MONUMENTS ON MARS?

by Spencer Wolling

At the February meeting of the UFO Study Group of Greater St. Louis, a video tape will be shown that will feature peculiar topographic features discovered on the planet Mars. The video features Richard C. Hoagland, NASA consultant, space scientist and science advisor to Walter Cronkite and CBS.

Hoagland organized the Mars Project to promote the scientific investigation of segments of tape recorded by the unmanned spacecraft Viking Orbiter 1 taking pictures while circling Mars in 1976. The tapes revealed an unusual formation that on close analysis appears to be a human face on a desert on Mars.

Continued research for at least ten years has developed an impressive array of computer generated enhanced views of the Cydonia area of Mars. This area includes the face and other enigmatic artifacts such as pyramids and outcroppings of a buried city. This study was published in 1987 in a book named "The Monuments of Mars - A City on the Edge of Forever". This led to Hoagland's "Intelligence Hypothesis" theory that these artifacts were not produced by forces of nature.

Hoagland also founded the Mars Mission which was formed to convince the scientific community and NASA that the next flight to Mars should include a close examination of the Cydonia area. That mission left Earth in September and should reach Mars in August 1993 and start sending pictures 50 times more detailed than in the first Viking Orbiter, possibly including this mysterious area.

To learn more about this phenomenon, join us at the Study Group meeting on Sunday, February 14 at 2:00 p.m. at the Tyler Place Presbyterian Church Hall, 2109 S. Spring at Russell in St. Louis.

A TIP OF THE HAT AND MANY THANKS

We at the UFO STUDY GROUP OF GREATER ST. LOUIS would like to thank Mr. Thomas Crone for his excellent write-up entitled "Little Gray Matters" in the Riverfront Times of January 13-19, 1993. We extend a personal invitation to Mr. Crone to come join us the second Sunday of every month and appreciate his open-minded approach to his report of this meeting.

January Meeting: A Review and Response to SECRET LIFE
Firsthand Accounts of UFO Abductions
by David M. Jacobs, Ph.D.

Meeting Report by Marge Myers,
Recording Secretary

Although the weather was somewhat uncooperative on January 10, 1993, the UFO Study Group of Greater St. Louis met to hear a report on Dr. David Jacobs' latest book entitled SECRET LIFE. Spencer Wolling, Treasurer, offered an objective review of the book, calling it "very realistic".

After giving a brief history of Jacobs' educational background and subsequent interest in the subject of UFO's, Wolling quoted Jacobs as saying, "I knew if I was going to make sense of what was happening, I would have to do abduction research myself." Jacobs had never hypnotized anybody and at first saw it as a frightening prospect. However, in 1985 he sat in on numerous hypnotic sessions with Budd Hopkins. Jacobs read numerous books on hypnosis, attended conferences, and dedicated a great deal of time to learning proper techniques for hypnotic regression. In time, Jacobs became an expert and felt he could trust himself better than anyone else when it came to this facet of abductee research. In the next 5 years, Jacobs performed over 325 hypnotic regressions, and out of those sessions uncovered 60 abductees.

During his years of active investigation, Jacobs' thorough questioning of abductees revealed a pattern to the abductions, a common scenario matrix consisting of physical, mental and reproductive procedures, each broken down into primary, secondary and ancillary routines. (See chart on Page 3 for Jacobs' detailed scenario.)

Wolling read selected bits from the forward to SECRET LIFE written by Dr. John E. Mack, a well-known and learned abduction researcher. "The idea that men, women and children can be taken against their wills from their homes, cars and schoolyards by strange humanoid beings, lifted onto spacecraft and subjected to intrusive and threatening procedures is so terrifying, and so shattering to our notions of what is possible in our universe, that the actuality of the phenomenon has been largely rejected out of hand or bizarrely distorted in most media accounts. . ."

John Schroeder was the next speaker, who stated before he began his talk "I felt I ought to give a response to the book rather than a review." The subjective review that ensued was fascinating in that he shared many of his personal experiences, including dreams and his interpretation of them.

Schroeder told of his early childhood experience of a very severe nosebleed. He bled intensely for over two hours before his family could stop it. Some 30 years later, Schroeder reported a dream that there were basically two kinds of creatures, one being was benevolent and the other malevolent. In other dreams he was told about a civilization that had colonized on one of 5 planets in a double star system. The existence of this double star system was later scientifically verified.

He had written down various dreams and things he had been told in them long before information regarding such subjects had been published. One of these was concerning implants. He had been told that little metal BB-like implants were being used that had barbs on them like swastikas which made them less likely to come loose. They were placed in the sinus cavities or other parts of the body and were used in tracking and/or controlling individuals.

Schroeder said he was told later implants are now made of a plastic-like material which makes them less likely to be detected by CAT Scans and other imaging equipment.

Schroeder said in SECRET LIFE Dr. Jacobs questions whether the concrete memories of abductees are reliable or whether they are controlled memories or confabulation (the unconscious invention and filling in of memories) meant to answer questions that are unanswerable. Jacobs also says some of these memories may be "manipulation", which would be disinformation and false cover stories planted by the abductor in the mind of the abductee. Schroeder said the only reason he is bold enough to stand up in front of the group to tell his experiences is that unlike channelling or disinformation, there has been later verification for some of the things he said.

Jacobs discusses teleportation, and Schroeder gave his personal interpretation of a dream he had where he was taken from his bed and transported at a great height and could look down on the states, even though there was quite a cloud cover. He was lowered to the ground in California where he saw something that was apparently a future event. Hispanic people were harvesting tokay grapes in a field, which indicated that it must be August or September. Schroeder saw what was to have been the result of water lubricated falls - "the year of the floods" (which may or may not be this year). Schroeder said there was a massive earthquake felt clear to Kansas, and it was to destroy a number of large dams including the Hoover Dam. The Colorado River would flow with full force all the way down to its Mexican entrance and there would be a great loss of life. Schroeder said he saw the center of California tip and fall into the sea.

Schroeder said that when he awakened from this dream he was very upset and felt something had to be done. He drew a picture of the State of California showing exactly where he saw the faults that would cause this devastation and sent it to the geology department of the University of Southern California. In 2 weeks his material was returned along with a note stating that the University was not in the business of predicting earthquakes. They said they laid a copy of the satellite photo of the state over his picture and wondered where he got his map because they matched line for line and curve for curve. Schroeder said there is some verification, and something obviously happened that he had this information that was reproducible.

These views of Jacobs' book made for a most interesting afternoon.

Primary experiences, which involve procedures that the aliens perform the greatest number of times on the greatest number of people and that set the structure for all other procedures to come.

Secondary experiences, which occur less frequently. All abductees have some secondary experiences, but not during every episode, and some procedures might never be performed on individual abductees.

Ancillary experiences, which involve specialized sexual and other irregular procedures. These happen infrequently to the abductee population as a whole, but may recur many times to an individual abductee.

PARAPSYCHOLOGISTS DISCUSS "PAIN-IN-THE-NECK" TECHNIQUES

by John E. Schroeder

The Parapsychology Committee met January 20 to discuss the Paramann Program. Psychics underwent 10 years of laboratory experimentation in Aman, Jordan so that psychologists could evaluate their techniques for withstanding pain and avoiding infection. Swamis, Gurus, Fakirs and others who claimed to have achieved such levels of body control had long needles or metal picks inserted into cheeks, thorough necks and even body structures of the body. (See following photographs.)

Several psychics met the challenge of apparently painless punctures, but practically none manifested the virtually immediate healing which prevented infection. All of them had undergone years of training in mental disciplines (Jahrlangen Konzentration-subungen) to achieve such unusual skills.

The staff at Paramann Program Laboratories determined to concentrate their techniques into a short, concise, effective mind-control training program which could benefit medical science. They claim that Tariqa Casnazaniyya, a Sufi discipline set forth as formalized doctrine in the 7th century, produced amazingly consistent results.

In 1988, Spontaneous Transmission was developed which supposedly allows the transfer of psychic powers en-masse to willing participants. Dr. Wolfgang Larbig and Dr. Hiroshi Matoyama assert - despite Paramann Program statistics - that many years of training are essential before an "adherent" can achieve successful Schmerzdemstration. In fact, they claim that such quickly learned powers can be turned off by mental blocks projected from other Masters. Paramann Program scientists counter with their newly developed "switch technique" which prevents the "off" mechanism from being used. The Parapsychology Committee members were skeptical, but pass on a direct mail address:

It's life, Tim, but not as we know it

TIMOTHY GOOD has been described as a "maniac" whose "thrill yappings" are believed only by "sub-normal people". This makes him smile all the way to the bank.

He has two strings to his bow. As an accomplished violinist he was with the London Symphony Orchestra for 14 years and has played under many famous conductors, among them Klemperer, Stravinsky and Mafanoni. Beside the window of his Beckenham flat hangs a picture of Beethoven. In front of the window is a camera clamped to a tripod. The powerful telephoto lens points to the sky. Somewhere up there are creatures which provide the howls and second string: "extra-terrestrial biological entities". Mr Good is a student of flying saucers, aliens, and of what he asserts is a near-impenetrable conspiracy by governments to hide the truth.

As a UFO buff he has prolied handsomely from books on the subject. Two things prompted me to meet him. The first was a letter from his literary agent Andrew Lowrie lamenting that "it is easy to poke fun at Tim, who deserved a fair hearing". The second was the appearance on a Scottish hillside, last week, of the world's first monument to a visit by a UFO. The metal plaque, in West Lothian, commemorates the 1979 sighting of a "spaceship" which overpowered a forestry worker, tore his clothes and gassed him before speeding off.

The West Lothian incident attracted the interest of Arthur C Clarke, the science writer, who made a detailed record. It so happens that Tim Good's father, who worked in radar, shared an RAF camp with "Spaceship Clarke," as he was then known, during and after the Second World War. "Arthur Clarke was called a complete nutter in those days," Mr Good says pleasantly.

UFO monitors tend to get mocked mercilessly. Reaction can be at best sceptical; at worst, a howl of ridicule.

In his latest book, Alien Liaison, The Ultimate Secret, about to be released in paperback (Arrow, £4.99), Mr Good describes conversations which others have had with beings from outer space, adding: "Though highly evolved spiritually, these people were 'down to Earth' in the sense that they enjoyed creature comforts. And — thank heavens — they had a sense of humour." His own sense of humour helps him cope with reviewers, one of whom wrote (in The Daily Telegraph) of an earlier volume, Above Top Secret, The Worldwide UFO Cover-up.

"I do not know how many trees were cut down to produce this 590-page diatribe, but I wish they had been left standing... Mr Good's ideas are those of a maniac."

Of Alien Liaison, the same writer declared (in The Spectator): "It is painful to turn to the thrill yappings of Timothy Good... The thesis, which he shouts rather than argues, is that aliens are constantly visiting Earth and that the US Government is 'covering them up'. Really? ... Only mentally subnormal people could believe in it." Another reviewer found it "credulous bunk". Most reviews are kinder, however.

His literary agent, a military historian with knowledge of intelligence matters, sent me a photograph of his client which resembled Captain Kirk of the starship Enterprise. In the flesh, he

Mr Good, now 49, had just entered his teens when a cousin in American computer research sent him a book about space aliens. "I was immediately excited," he says. "There had been reports from military and civilian airline pilots that the general public wasn't aware of: to date, 3,500 sightings since the 1940s. The majority remain classified — in the interests of national security, the various government agencies say — but details of some have been released." He shows me documents he obtained, using the US Freedom of Information Act, from the Pentagon, North American Aerospace Defense Command and other sources. Sections have been blacked out by the censor.

His pursuit of "the truth" — that UFOs exist, that their occupants actually walk the Earth, and that governments know a lot more than they're prepared to acknowledge — intensified after he left the LSO in 1978 (he still does "session work", including television commercials and films). In 1983, he published an exploratory volume about UFOs at his own expense. Two for about 10 years, during which I have formed the opinion that he is both honest and reliable. I am quite sure that he is not a "nut-case"...

The book is, by its nature, weird, re-creating, for example, the alleged encounters between "Ethernians" (occupants of UFOs) and two American Republican presidents, Dwight D Eisenhower and Ronald Reagan.

According to Mr Good's informants, during an unscheduled visit to Edwards Air Force Base in California Eisenhower was taken to Hangar 27 where a thine saucer and its occupants were housed. The Ethernians "had the same proportions as humans and were able to breathe our atmosphere." Mr Good records. They spoke English, and supposedly informed the president that they wanted to start an "educational programme" for the people of Earth, then reportedly demonstrated their paranormal powers by making themselves invisible, causing Eisenhower considerable embarrassment.

Like, who often had difficulty stringing sentences together, could have used an "educational programme". Ditto Ronald Reagan. In 1974, according to Mr Good, the then airborne governor of California saw "a big light" and ordered the pilot to give chase. "We followed it for several minutes," Reagan is reported as having said. "All of a sudden, to our utter amazement it went straight up into the heavens. When I got off the plane I told Nancy all about it." Eight years later, while viewing the film ET in the White House, President Reagan whispered to the producer Steven Spielberg: "There are probably only six people in this room who know how true this is."

Mr Good says: "I haven't actually confirmed that last bit with Spielberg, but I will."

Then there is Jimmy Carter's sighting. During his 1976 Presidential election campaign Carter announced that he'd seen a UFO in 1969.

I ask Mr Good "Did you know about Jimmy Carter's giant rabbit?"

"No."

"Well, towards the end of his presidency, he declared that while out in a boat fishing on a lake in Plains, Georgia, he was attacked by a giant rabbit. It seems less exotic: tall, grey haired, pale, serious, courteous, softly spoken. He wears an elegant grey suit and dark-blue tie. His hands are long and hairless, the fingers tapering artistically. There is a sty on his right eyelid. The bedroom which he shares with his girlfriend, a teacher, has a wall lined with UFO books. In the hall, there are shelves of classified documents from many parts of the world and folders of newspaper and magazine clippings. Along a wall of the living-room are hi-fi equipment, LPs and tapes. Against another is a word processor. Near the sky-probing camera are a music-stand supporting sheets of Bach, an art deco china cabinet and an enormous hi-fi speaker. He serves coffee in red cups and sticks a cigarette into a holder.

thousand copies were sold, bringing a tiny profit. His researches have taken him into the Pentagon and the White House office, and he has talked (sometimes inconclusively) to the CIA, military officers and space scientists.

ABOVE TOP SECRET, published by Sidgwick & Jackson in 1987, and later by Grafton Books, went to the top of the bestseller lists in Britain and Australia and has since done well in the United States, Canada, Germany and Japan. Alien Liaison, too, is likely to be a commercial success (18,000 hardback sales already). It is dedicated to Britain's former Chief of Defence Staff, Admiral of the Fleet Lord Hill-Norton, whose introductory comments include the words: "I have known Tim Good

It's an archeological treasure trove where earthlings used to sacrifice to their god "Ecology."

INDEPENDENT, London, England - Feb. 9, 1992

came swimming towards him and he had to head for shore to avoid being capsized."

"Oh," Mr Good says, wondering if I'm mocking him. I'm not.

I suspect a large part of Mr Good's struggle is trying to lift the UFO subject out of the realm of entertainment. Out There, a 1990 book by the former New York Times journalist Howard Blum, whose work the Englishman admires, is being made into a Disney film. A former US astronaut Edgar Mitchell, who has claimed that important information on extra-terrestrials is being suppressed by his government, ended up on The Oprah Winfrey Show. When Mr Good himself appeared on a British television discussion recently, one of his interlocutors, the "pop" scientist Heinz Wolff, described Mr Good's work as "bollocks".

But while critics tease, he points to the fact that American scientists this October will begin a 10-year, $100m (£55.5m) project, using the most sophisticated listening devices, to search for alien civilisations. The NASA project will be called SETI (Search for Extra-terrestrial Intelligence), rhyming with yeti, another elusive quarry.

I suggest to the violinist there is a contradiction here: on the one hand, he claims that US officialdom has firm evidence of extra-terrestrials, while on the other, the official agency, NASA, is setting out to test their existence. He concedes: "There is a tremendous argument against everything I'm saying." But he nods confidently at his folders of classified CIA material showing UFOs to be a high-priority matter.

Mr Good has enlisted helpers all over the world, including China and Russia. Their sightings are published in an annual UFO report which he edits. In it he identifies hoaxes (some, but not all, stop circles) and explores other phenomena in minute detail, including scientific evaluation of photographs and video tapes of "aberrations".

I have read all this stuff with a fairly open mind, even the account of the removal by aliens of a cow's udders and vagina. Mr Good does not seem dogmatic about his material or his qualifications for analysing it. "I left school with 13 per cent in maths (D-level)," he says. As the "fair hearing" ends, he murmurs: "I hope I am not a fanatic."
